U. S. WAR VETERANS ARRIVE TODAY

500 MILLION CANDLE-POWER LIGHTS TO GUIDE AIR MAILMEN
IN FLIGHTS BETWEEN NEW YORK AND SAN FRANCISCO

Above is shown one of the 500 million candle-power B. B. T. Field flood-lights with which the air mail fields from New York to San Francisco are to be equipped. The project light covers an area of approximately half a mile. The intensity is such that a book or newspaper may be read within a distance of from two to three miles from the light. It is visible from the air for a distance of from 60 to 75 miles. The beam of light is thrown directly on the field and does not reflect more than four feet in the air and consequently cannot blind the pilot.

BERKELEY-S. F. FERRY PLANNED

BERKELEY, June 23.—A proposal to construct an automobile ferry between Berkeley and San Francisco was presented to the city council this morning by the Golden Gate Ferry company of San Francisco, A. O. Stewart, president.

Under the terms of the proposal, the ferry company would construct a three-mile pier into the bay from the present terminus of University avenue, with provisions to be made for a municipal pier to replace the present city wharf.

The proposed ferry service will involve an expenditure of approximately $2,000,000, according to an announcement this morning of President Stewart. He also announced that his company plans, if awarded the lease the inauguration of a triangular service between Berkeley, San Francisco and Sausalito.

Ferries would be operated by the company from the present Hyde street and Sausalito piers to the new Berkeley wharf.

CHIMNEY FIRE ALARM

The fire department was called out yesterday morning to put out a chimney fire at the John Hutton home, 429 Twelfth street. No damage was done as the blaze was quickly extinguished. The department also answered an alarm for a grass fire in Mira Vista, but it developed that the M. A. Hays company had a crop of men burning the grass in that vicinity.

S. P. Brakeman Killed While Switching Cars

Arthur J. Snell, 24, brakeman for the Southern Pacific company, was killed at Solby early yesterday afternoon as a result of being struck by a car while switching. The cars were being moved from one track to another, and Snell was hanging on the side, when he struck a stationary car, being knocked off the car on which he was riding.

He was the husband of Mrs. Marjory E. Snell of 254 Fifth street, Oakland. Remains are at the Grant Miller parlors in Oakland, pending funeral arrangements.

Steps in Gasoline, It Burns His Leg

R. P. Dunn, 518 Twelfth street, was painfully burned about the right leg, below the knee and on the hand, by a small gasoline fire in front of the West Side Garage on Garrard avenue last night.

Dunn stepped into a small pool of gasoline on the street, and it is believed that sparks from nails in his shoes ignited the fire. His trousers' leg caught fire, and several bad burns were received before the blaze was extinguished.

An officer of the police department was sent to the scene and the blaze was put out in short order before any serious property damage could be done.

TICKETS READY FOR AIR MEET

Citizens and visitors to Richmond are asked to aid in preventing congestion at the gates of the Richmond airport by purchasing their tickets in advance for the air congress Saturday and Sunday.

There will be thousands of visitors at the air meet who will not have an opportunity to buy their tickets in advance and it is hoped to give these as much consideration as possible.

For this reason the Chamber of Commerce has placed the tickets on sale at the office of A. L. Faulsen in the California Theatre building. Mrs. Marie Jensen has charge of the tickets for the Richmond Business and Professional Women's club and will distribute them upon request at the Chamber of Commerce office on Tenth street.

Tickets for admission to the air field are only fifty cents and parking space for automobiles is provided free of charge. The highway in front of the field will be closed to through traffic both Saturday and Sunday, by arrangements with the state highway commission.

Members of the Business and Professional women's club will devote their noon luncheon hour both Thursday and Friday to the sale of tickets among the citizens and visitors in Richmond. Etta Haley yesterday took the first block of fifty tickets for sale while the honor of buying the first ticket to the meet goes to Isaac Lester.

"Aviation," an aeronautical magazine published in New York City, the oldest magazine in the interest of flying in the world, carries a big story about the Richmond air meet in its June issue, which has just arrived here.

Entries are all completed for the four big races of the meet, from Glendale, Fresno, Sacramento and Santa Rosa to Richmond, which will take place Saturday morning.

Richmond Church Fellowship Says Were Encouraged To Present Law

Declaring that they wished the public to "know the truth" in regard to their stand on the recently proposed ban on Sunday skating and dancing in Richmond, the Richmond Church Fellowship yesterday issued the following statement.

"In view of the fact that much questioning and misunderstanding has been going around concerning the so-called squabble between the Richmond Church Fellowship and the City Council, we, the undersigned committee of the Richmond Church Fellowship wish to make the following explanations:

"First, that the Richmond Church Fellowship at a regular monthly meeting by a unanimous vote, authorized and empowered this committee to bring the matter of eliminating all Sunday dancing and Sunday roller skating from our city.

"Second, that said committee called on Mayor Plate and Attorney D. J. Hall and were encouraged to take the matter before the City Council, and further we state that the Mayor expressed himself highly in favor of prohibiting all Sunday desecration and asked us to bring members of the Richmond Church Fellowship to the Council Chamber to lend their influence and speak in behalf of the measure. We attended with large delegations on both the 8th and 15th of June and were permitted to speak on the night of the 8th, but on the 15th, when the ordinance was read again and voted on, we were not permitted to produce any evidence or pass any comment till after the vote was taken.

"Third, that the Richmond Church Fellowship further wish to correct a statement made by Councilman Black on the night of the 15th, when he seconded the rejection of the Sunday ordinance and emphatically stated that Omaha, Nebraska, Lodi, California and Eugene, Oregon had passed ordinances prohibiting Sunday dancing and Sunday roller skating and that they had been thrown out and were not enforced. We here by submit a letter from the Police Judge of Eugene, Oregon, in regard to Black's statement:

"City of Eugene, Oregon prohibits Sunday dances, skating and theatres, including picture shows on Sunday, and the law is enforced. No attempt has been made for years to break the same.

"Signed,
"Jesse G. Wells, Police Judge, Eugene, Oregon."

"Thanking the daily papers of our city for printing these explanations, we are, Yours for a Better City, Committee.

RICHMOND IS HOST TODAY TO WAR VETERANS

Fifteen Hundred Delegates to Annual Convention Expected to Be Here Rest of Week

TWO STATES REPRESENTED

Informal Dance Tonight at New Veterans Memorial Hall to Open Festivities Here

With the delegates beginning to arrive, Richmond today prepared to be host to 500 or more over-seas war veterans of California, Nevada and Hawaii, who will assemble here tomorrow evening for the fifth annual district convention of the veterans of Foreign Wars.

All flags and decorations will be displayed today, so that Richmond will have a gala appearance before night fall.

The first arrival for the convention is Clyde Gerdy of New York, who arrived in this city yesterday enroute to a Veterans of Foreign Wars convention at Tulsa, Oklahoma. Gerdy suffered the loss of both feet in the battle of the Argonne, just three days before the signing of the armistice.

This catastrophe daunts the man little however, as he has a little hand cart with which he propels himself about the city in which he is stopping. The cart is equipped with headlights, tail light, horn and other equipment in conformity to the "Safety First" ordinance. During the convention Gerdy will be located at 514 Macdonald avenue.

Scheduled to last three days, the convention will open Thursday morning in Memorial hall, a brick and stone structure recently completed by the citizens of Contra Costa county at a cost of $100,000.

Business sessions and the various events that have been planned by local veterans for the entertainment of the visitors and their wives, will keep the delegates fully occupied during their stay. Featuring the entertainment program is a dance and reception to be given in Memorial hall Wednesday evening, a parade Thursday evening, a sight-seeing tour Friday and a military ball in the evening, and on Saturday afternoon, a visit to the Richmond air congress.

The election on Saturday morning of a new department commander and other department officers is scheduled.

WOMAN CLAIMS SUICIDE TEST; MAN IS HELD

Richmond Police Puzzled By Attempt on Life of Local Woman; Companion Held

MRS. MORA IS IN HOSPITAL

Wound is Not Serious But Man Refuses to Talk in Strange Local Mystery Case

Mrs. Minnie Mora, who resides in Kelsey street, North Richmond, received an extremely severe wound on the back of her right arm last night, inflicted either by herself or by Frank Crosby, 1693 Willow street, Oakland, Richmond police aver.

According to Mrs. Mora's own statement, she slashed her arm with a 12-inch kitchen knife in an attempt to commit suicide, but was prevented from doing so by Crosby, who was with her at the house at the time. Crosby has refused to make any statement in regard to the manner in which the knife wound was inflicted, according to reports coming from the police department. He is being held pending a thorough investigation into the matter.

Any motive for Mrs. Mora's attempt to take her life still remains shrouded in mystery to the police, as at a expressed the reason for the action. Mrs. Mora was taken to the Abbott Emergency hospital where the knife slash was temporarily treated. She was later removed to the Cottage hospital for further treatment and to staunch the rapid flow of blood from the wound. She is being treated by Dr. Abbott, who reported that she was resting easily late last night. It is believed that no more inconvenience than a few days lay-up will result from the experience.

Inspector Wiley and Officer Frey of the Police department made the arrest of Crosby after Mrs. Mora had been removed to the Emergency hospital.

Civic Center is El Cerrito Plan

El Cerrito will have a civic center, with the new fire hall, in the vicinity of Stockton street and Moser Lane, if the wishes of the El-Cerrito Improvement association are carried out.

FORTUNATE INJURIES

Physical disability resulting from an industrial accident," says the head of an electric engineering company, "has in many cases proved beneficial to the victim."

This is not a satirical reference to damages. Industrial compensation there may be, to pay the victim in part, at least, for his physical impairment. But the reference is to the workman's own future success.

"A physical handicap," continues the engineer, "often proves an incentive to do the job better than under ordinary circumstances. The workman works harder, and with his new training grows so efficient that he may make higher wages than before."

This implies rehabilitation work for victims of industry as for victims of war, which is a logical thing and eventually will be expected as a matter of course. But it recognizes, too, the moral factor. The wage-earner, as the result of a serious accident, may get moral and mental shaking up that impels him to make better use of his talents. Many an office worker has had such an experience.

A moderate amount of misfortune seems good for people. Nearly all of us have more ability than we are using. A partial loss of ability brings to an intelligent and courageous person new appreciation of what is left and a will to use it better. This is one reason why middle aged or elderly men often shoulder out young men, in spite of their physical inferiority. They do not squander their powers, but make the best of what they have.

THIS BUSINESS OF GIVING

Both in output and method giving is assuming the guise of one of the important business undertakings in the United States. Probably only a small proportion of the money devoted by the American people to charitable and philanthropic enterprise is represented by community chests, but 149 of these, out of a total of more than 225, collected last year $43,270,002, which was only $1,284,890 less than the total of the amounts they sought.

The church was once the almoner of the world, but American business men are now the chief financial contributors to agencies dealing with social problems and it is largely upon the initiative of commercial organizations that the collection and administration of funds for this purpose have been put upon a systematic basis.

An extended study of these modern methods of giving, as exemplified in the "financial federation" and "community chest," has been made by the Civic Development Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. "Our experience," it says in its report, "with federations and community chests is not yet sufficient for us to reach conclusions and stop thinking. The federation idea is spreading. It will probably become generally accepted. But the form it shall finally take, its purposes beyond the raising of money, its methods—these are not settled. And if they are settled wrong, the loss will fall not upon the agencies alone but upon business and society in general."

GLASS WORKERS' BANK

Another labor union goes into the banking business. This time it is the American Fine Glass Workers' Union. It is going to open its own bank immediately in Toledo, Ohio, where its national headquarters are situated.

The organization is well equipped for this step, at least as far as funds are concerned. On April 1 it had $694,000 in its treasury, mostly deposited in Toledo banks, and it is said to be the richest union per capita in the world.

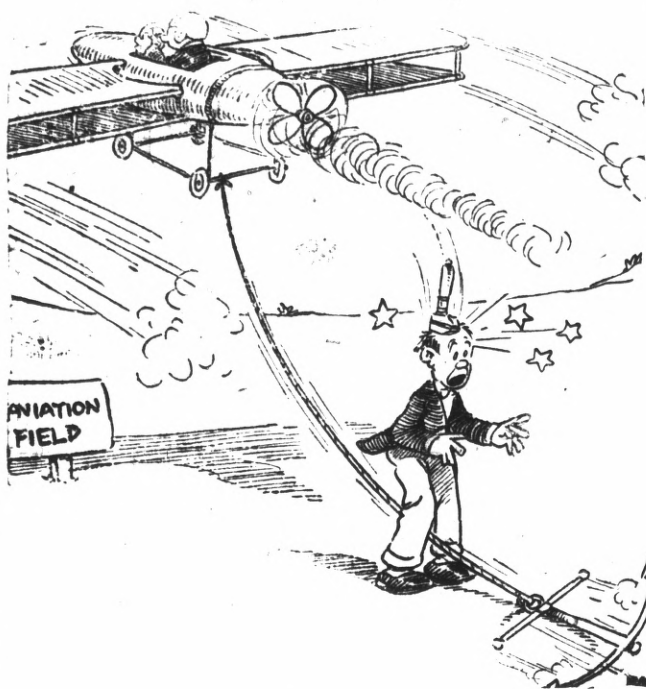

It is a natural development for a union that has a lot of money on deposit in a bank operated by "capitalists" to go ahead and open a bank of its own to hold the money. And then, having given its own patronage to its own bank, it is natural to reach out and invite deposits from other sources. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers showed the way, and various unions are following, making a surprisingly easy transition from "labor" to "capitalism."

HANDLING CONVENTIONS

Handling a convention of a trade, professional or other type of organization is given the aspect of a science in a pamphlet on the subject prepared by John N. Van der Vries and issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

To the lay mind conventions might appear to be agglomerations of delegates wearing badges of many hues, but to the manager, who is rapidly developing into a professional expert, like the efficiency engineer and the publicity adviser, they are a serious business. Mr. Van der Vries under thirteen headings lists 161 items which must be taken into account in preparing for, holding and summing up the results of conventions. He points out the particular wheels in the involved mechanism upon which a successful convention depends. His outline, "The Handling of Conventions" may be obtained from the Organization Service Bureau of the National Chamber at Washington.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL
Copyright 1925 by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Watch for the Fullness at the Back of the Skirt. It's New and Very Smart.

WHEN some of us were young the "normal" place for a belt or a skirt was at the back. Just as the "normal" place for a belt or girdle was at the slenderest line between hips and ribs. With many women there still survives a stifled sort of conviction that fullness of skirt belongs at the back. But to a younger generation there is something rather amusing, a trifle extreme about such a thing. The logical place, from the present point of view, for an inverted box pleat in a skirt is right in the middle with this new silhouette. From this house have come interesting little frocks short of skirt and quite wearable, that maintain the straight slender silhouette in spite of the gatherings at the back. Coats, too, from Martini et Armand show fullness at the back that is managed by means of an inverted box pleat or skillfully arranged goring. In every case the straight, slender line at the back continues from the shoulder to the line of the hips, or lower, before the fullness or gathering appears.

WITH SEALING WAX

FOR several years women have been using sealing wax to make beads, to decorate candles and candlesticks and to do other sorts of handicraft. Quite the latest trick is to trim hats with the wax, following the fashion of a clever milliner. Especially attractive are the sealing wax roses applied directly to the straw hat. Another means of using sealing wax on hats is to make the decoration on ribbon which is then used to form a band around the crown. The ends of ribbon may be weighted with ornaments of the wax and left hanging at one side of the hat.

GOOD CANDIES

Good Peppermints

Dissolve one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar in a teaspoon of cold water, add to one pound of white sugar, and place over the fire, and boil until a sample cooled in water can be rolled into a ball with the fingers. Then remove from the fire and allow it to cool a little, and then beat with a spoon until it turns white. Add three drops of oil of peppermint and mix it well into the candy. If the candy hardens too quickly while beating, set the bowl in a tin of boiling water. Make into balls with the hands.

Butter Scotch

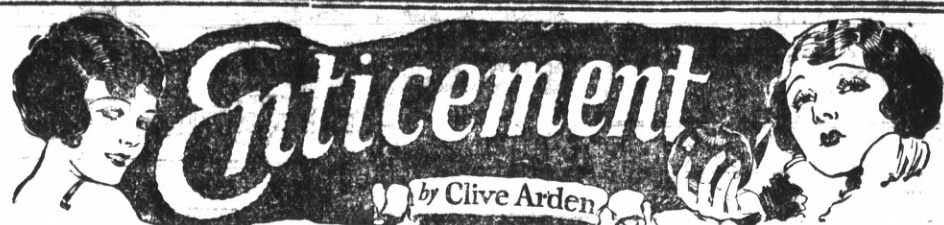

One cup of sugar, one cup of butter, one tablespoon of vinegar and one cup of maple syrup. Boil until it will harden when dropped in cold water. Take from stove and pour in buttered tins, cut in circles and then put in cold place to harden. Use round cover to cut the circles.

Corn Crisps

One cup brown sugar, one-half cup molasses, one tablespoon butter, one-half cup coconut, two quarts popped corn. Cook sugar, molasses and butter until they will crack in cold water. Pour on corn, stirring with fork. Sprinkle with coconut and press quickly.

WHIST AT MUSICIANS HALL TOMORROW P. M.

Mrs. E. W. Whitman will hold a whist party tomorrow evening at Musicians hall at 8:30. A large attendance is expected. Prizes will be awarded those having the highest scores.

For the second time in her life Leo felt herself in contact with the bedrock of the elemental hidden behind a man's reserve.

"Will you listen to me?" The knuckles unclenched themselves, and his hands met together over his head. She felt a mild wonder at the muffled hoarseness of his voice.

"I am waiting to hear." "In my bag on the table you will find the notice. You can read for yourself the facts—as they are made to appear. My efforts to explain the truth are apparently useless. You . . . you always liked—facts."

For a moment he remained motionless. Slowly moving at last, with his back still toward her, he picked up the little suede bag. Taking out the folded sheet of paper, he held it between undecided fingers as if hesitating to read some doom. . . . At last, with abrupt decision, he opened it and walked yet farther away, toward the window. This action contrasted so vividly with Val's clinging, protective warmth, that she realized the contrast bitterly, almost contemptuously.

For several minutes the clock's ticking was, again, the only sound to be heard.

At last he turned back, and the strangeness of his face startled her. Every feature was set in a rigidity that resembled some waxen mold. She seemed to be looking into the eyes of an acquaintance whom she barely knew.

"Well?" He shot the word out, with the curtness of a rifle crack.

"What is your version—of those charges? What can you deny?"

"I can deny the whole charge—what it insinuates. These facts are but distortions."

He glanced again at the paper in his hand. "I must hear your version—of each episode. This . . . this bathroom—"

"That is mostly a lie! The door was never locked. Val—"

"Yes, Val." Conscious of the curl of his lip, she narrated shortly the episode of the morning bath at Basle. To one immersed in the strict prudery of middle-class morals it sounded preposterous. He could not conceive of any man going to a woman's bathroom to feel if the water were hot, far less of his sitting on the bath to smoke a cigarette while she began to disrobe. It was "cheap" . . . horrible. . .

When he reached the final charge and, with the ruthlessness of a cross-examining counsel, probed deeper and deeper into that old wound, her face grew deathly in its whiteness.

"I know nothing about the book," she declared impatiently. "I arrived there ill . . . hurt. And then I forgot to sign—"

"Why?" A protesting hand alone answered the question. "Everything seemed so unreal, that night . . . so hurried . . . Val carried me straight to my room. Naturally, he stayed with me."

"Naturally?"

"Of course. Oh, Harry, Harry . . . if you knew Val you would understand."

"I don't want prevarications now, Leo. Remember, I already know a great deal about that night. I want the bald truth, please. Did . . . did this man make love to you then? Is that what you have been hiding? . . . Ah!"

Her face had sunk into her hands. "Consider the strain we had both endured . . . Harry could barely catch the trembling words muffled by her fingers. "I . . . I was . . . thoughtless. He . . . he was overwrought."

Harry rapped the table with his knuckles. "Will you please give a straight answer to a straight question? Did he or did he not?"

After a long vibrant pause he caught the halting whisper: "He . . . did."

Harry walked to his writing-table and sank into the chair. "I suppose that is all," he remarked dully.

"Ah!" She uncovered her face and glanced across at him quickly. "What do you mean? We . . . he . . . he realized . . . He went away to his room—"

"But never used it? Never slept in—his own—Ah! My God! He sprang to his feet. "Do you suppose any court of law—"

"Perhaps not. But you are not a court of law, Harry. You are my husband."

He thrust out a silencing hand. "You have already admitted you love the man."

"Not in that way . . . Oh, I have told you—"

"He . . . in this last charge he was seen—kissing you, in your room."

"That kiss was not when . . . It was no proof of—the kind of love you think—"

"But you allowed it?"

CHAPTER X

The strain relaxed that night with the effect of a highly pressed spring when the pressure is suddenly removed. Prostrate, utterly exhausted, Leo spent the next day in bed. She saw nobody except Ross and Little Mink. The love of a dog, she thought miserably, was truer, purer, than that of a husband. She hugged the little body close. And a queer thought dropped into Leo's tired mind. If this first present of Harry's were a different gift, a more wonderful gift? If this small warm body had been another child . . . the soul brought from beyond and clothed by Harry and herself in its mortal form. . . .

CHAPTER X

With face buried in her pillow she tried to crush these new strange longings that the thought conjured up. Val's ideal had become unexpectedly united with Harry, instead of remaining on a separate side of the gulf. But she scarcely realized the full import of this.

Harry had failed . . . Harry had failed. . . . All day the words dinned in her heart. With the fault common to those whose actions spring from emotional impulse she did not give reason its due. To love meant, with her, to act—generously, freely—regardless of costs. Anything else travestied the word.

And, aware of her old shrinking, it appeared incredible that the one man who had conquered her fastidiousness could seriously doubt her integrity.

He was away all day and rang up to say he could not return for dinner. Leo was glad. Late in the evening she heard him in his room; but he did not try the handle of the communicating door. It was long, now since that door had been opened. . . .

On Monday morning a letter from Val—in the scrawl that, to Harry, always seemed formed from liquid fire, not ink—stared up from the breakfast table. It drew his gaze and held it, fascinated, throughout his hurried meal. Leo purposely came down late nowadays. Their meals together had become intolerable. When she entered the room the letter was the first thing she noticed. Instinctively, hurriedly, she glanced across at Harry. Their eyes met. In his she read a challenge—and a reminder.

"Are you going to burn this letter, Leo—or shall I?"

And she saw herself, with suddenly flaming cheeks and flashing eyes, spring to her feet, snatch the envelope from under his fingers, and thrust it deep within the bosom of her frock.

"No!" her voice cried passionately. "No . . . I have told you . . . I refuse to give up—my friends."

She heard the deathly silence which, like a tangible thing, fell upon the room.

"Very well," that even desperate voice replied at last. He turned slowly to the door, then looked back, one hand pressing the woodwork heavily. "You remember? Of course you understand?"

She set her lips and stared hard at her plate, without replying.

But after that one flash of passion, a great and deadly calm descended upon Leo. Val's letter—which she loved for its very rashness in the circumstances—craved for news. When could he come and meet her husband? He had been spending hours with lawyers, "wallowing in muck." What was Leo doing with herself? And when would Harry return from Paris? She had promised to let him know . . .

Life, love and courage beckoned with warm enticing hands. . . .

Harry did not return home until dinner-time. One of the unexpected events continually cropping up in a large business with many branches called him to Manchester next day. He ordered the car to catch the early morning train from Covingham, and went straight upstairs to dress.

Much talk was taken place behind the scenes to-night—much conjecture. But Pomfrey was too dignified and well-trained to vouchsafe any remark to his master, when the dinner-gong sounded. Of late Leo had seized upon any excuse to absent himself from the strain of their guests together.

Harry, therefore, noted her absence silently and without apprehension. Whether the added dreariness that had pressed down his heart since breakfast cast an extra shadow over the opposite side of the table he could not tell. But the empty chair there looked curiously desolate. The room, in fact, seemed so unusually gloomy that he ordered another light to be switched on. Jutting from the wall was a picture of a man and a woman in a romantic pose, with the woman looking up at the man.

"Not in that way . . . Oh, I have told you . . ."

With face buried in her pillow she tried to crush these new strange longings that the thought conjured up. Val's ideal had become unexpectedly united with Harry, instead of remaining on a separate side of the gulf. But she scarcely realized the full import of this.

would Harry return from Paris? She had promised to let him know . . .

Life, love and courage beckoned with warm enticing hands. . . .

Harry did not return home until dinner-time. One of the unexpected events continually cropping up in a large business with many branches called him to Manchester next day. He ordered the car to catch the early morning train from Covingham, and went straight upstairs to dress.

Much talk was taken place behind the scenes to-night—much conjecture. But Pomfrey was too dignified and well-trained to vouchsafe any remark to his master, when the dinner-gong sounded. Of late Leo had seized upon any excuse to absent himself from the strain of their guests together.

Harry, therefore, noted her absence silently and without apprehension. Whether the added dreariness that had pressed down his heart since breakfast cast an extra shadow over the opposite side of the table he could not tell. But the empty chair there looked curiously desolate. The room, in fact, seemed so unusually gloomy that he ordered another light to be switched on. Jutting from the wall was a picture of a man and a woman in a romantic pose, with the woman looking up at the man.

"Not in that way . . . Oh, I have told you . . ."

With face buried in her pillow she tried to crush these new strange longings that the thought conjured up. Val's ideal had become unexpectedly united with Harry, instead of remaining on a separate side of the gulf. But she scarcely realized the full import of this.

Harry had failed . . . Harry had failed. . . . All day the words dinned in her heart. With the fault common to those whose actions spring from emotional impulse she did not give reason its due. To love meant, with her, to act—generously, freely—regardless of costs. Anything else travestied the word.

And, aware of her old shrinking, it appeared incredible that the one man who had conquered her fastidiousness could seriously doubt her integrity.

He was away all day and rang up to say he could not return for dinner. Leo was glad. Late in the evening she heard him in his room; but he did not try the handle of the communicating door. It was long, now since that door had been opened. . . .

On Monday morning a letter from Val—in the scrawl that, to Harry, always seemed formed from liquid fire, not ink—stared up from the breakfast table. It drew his gaze and held it, fascinated, throughout his hurried meal. Leo purposely came down late nowadays. Their meals together had become intolerable. When she entered the room the letter was the first thing she noticed. Instinctively, hurriedly, she glanced across at Harry. Their eyes met. In his she read a challenge—and a reminder.

"Are you going to burn this letter, Leo—or shall I?"

And she saw herself, with suddenly flaming cheeks and flashing eyes, spring to her feet, snatch the envelope from under his fingers, and thrust it deep within the bosom of her frock.

"No!" her voice cried passionately. "No . . . I have told you . . . I refuse to give up—my friends."

She heard the deathly silence which, like a tangible thing, fell upon the room.

"Very well," that even desperate voice replied at last. He turned slowly to the door, then looked back, one hand pressing the woodwork heavily. "You remember? Of course you understand?"

She set her lips and stared hard at her plate, without replying.

But after that one flash of passion, a great and deadly calm descended upon Leo. Val's letter—which she loved for its very rashness in the circumstances—craved for news. When could he come and meet her husband? He had been spending hours with lawyers, "wallowing in muck." What was Leo doing with herself? And when would Harry return from Paris? She had promised to let him know . . .

MacLean's Comedy at The California

Double-crossed in the game of love by his best friend. That is the fate of Douglas MacLean in his laughter-lightning, "Introduce Me," which comes to the screen of the California Theatre starting today.

"Introduce Me" Maclean Comedy At The California

A complete change of his long established policy is represented in Douglas MacLean's new comedy triumph, "Introduce Me," which comes to the California Theatre today.

Until now, MacLean has filmed only adaptations of stage successes. But today he flashes forth in a startlingly new picture from an original story by himself and his scenario staff—a story which the star has had in mind for the past three years.

Douglas MacLean's departure from his former policy, he explains, is because he is convinced that this new picture has a plot so novel, spontaneous and entertaining that it could not be approached by any stage adaptation obtainable. It took

Blanche Sweet in "Those who Dance" At The Richmond

"Those Who Dance," featuring Blanche Sweet, will be the feature screen offering at the Richmond Theatre today and tomorrow.

Here is life in the raw, a story dealing with that great American industry, bootlegging, and its effect on our modern social fabric.

This is a story that is decidedly up-to-date and everybody is going to find interest in it, in fact the tense melodramatic situations in the action-packed plot are going to compel you to keep your eyes glued to the screen.

Blanche Sweet gives a characterization that ranks with her portrayal of Anna Christie. The situations which develop when Blanche, in the role of Rose, foists a federal officer on "Red" Carney, a bootleg king, as her "reglar guy," and lives with him in Red's home to get the information needed to save her brother from the chair, is just about as daring as well as dramatic material as has been seen on the shadow stage in a long, long while.

"Those Who Dance" will be talked of also because of its unusual characterizations. Miss Sweet is superb, Bessie Love as an underworld flapper adds to her laurels. Warner Baxter never acted better in his life than he does as "Scar" Henry. Robert Agnew, Matthew Betz, and Frank Campeau are also included in the cast.

Other features on the same program include "Skinners in Silk," a Mack Sennett comedy; "Prizma," a screen magazine.

RAGS WANTED—Record-Herald

Individual Needs Should Govern Camper's Purchase of Tent

When choosing the tent, the camper should carefully study his own individual needs and make his purchase accordingly. A tent that might be ideal for one camping party will not always do for another. Here are a few of the many points to be considered before making the tent purchase: the number of people on the trip, the length of the trip, weather conditions, "one night" stands or a permanent camp, and the accommodations offered by the car itself.

The tent should be large enough to comfortably house every member of the party. It should be light and compact for ease in transportation. It must provide real shelter against storms, winds and cold. It should be equipped to keep out mosquitoes, bugs, insects, etc. The ideal tent can be set up by one person in a few minutes time.

There are many different types in tents but the two that have met with ready approval among the majority of auto campers are the palmetto or umbrella and the lean-to type.

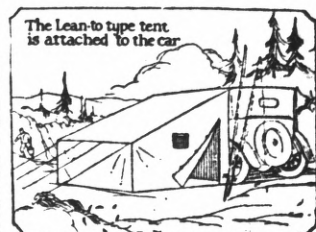

The lean-to or standard auto tent, is a very simple tent and very good for general auto camping purposes. It consists of a single sloping roof with a three foot back wall, side walls and an open front. The canopy at top of the tent extends over the car and fastens to the wheels or hubs on the opposite side of the car. When the standard auto tent is used the car can be made into a dressing room.

The palmetto and umbrella tent stand quite independent of the automobile. There are no guy ropes needed and only one center pole used on the palmetto. There are screen windows, a pocket, a full door completed with a canopy. It is very easy to set up; simply stake down the corners and raise the center pole. This tent is equipped with a sewed-in floor and a canvas sill that keeps out unwelcome visitors.

A bobinet fly may be had to fasten over the door to keep mosquitoes out of the tent.

You should have very little trouble in setting up your tent if you take special note how it is folded when you first take it out of the bag. Try setting up the tent in the back yard or use it over night to get used to handling it before you leave on your trip.

Most of the modern tents come complete with jointed poles and wooded stakes. It is advisable to carry a number of extra metal stakes as the wood stakes that come with the tents are more easily broken than the metal ones.

The poles and stakes should be carried in a separate bag. This method saves wear on the tent and eliminates all danger of flaying the tent punctured by a sharp tent stake or pole tip.

Belasco Play at Wesley Church Is Brimful of Humor

When "Dadlies" comes to the Wesley Methodist church, corner Ninth street and N. Main avenue, Friday evening at 7:15, you will have an opportunity to see one of the very finest of state productions presented in motion pictures by a handpicked cast of brilliant stars.

"Dadlies" is one of the very best of the Belasco plays, a clean, sparkling comedy that will chase away the gloom and the joy-killing blues. It is a picture that combines comedy, pathos and drama in just the right proportion for maximum entertainment quality. Advance reports indicate that this picture is already enjoying success as one of the very best pictures of the year.

A bachelor club and the problems of its members who, at a moment of weakness, decide to adopt a war orphan each, gives rise to the very funny comedy situations. There is a very pretty love theme in the case of the bachelor who finds his "orphan" to be a very pretty girl of seventeen. And there is some pathos in the case of the man who finds his "orphan" to be the tribulations. But overcome is happy when the extremely pleasing ending shows the bachelors all getting married and making comfortable homes for a number of fine women and children.

A splendid cast has been selected for this picture. Mae Marsh and Harry Myers are the stars. Others in the cast are Claude Gillingwater, Claire Adams, Willard Louis, Crawford Kent, Georgia Woodthorpe, Otto Hoffman, Beve Combe, Millie Davenport, Muriel Frances Dana, Priscilla Dean Moran, the De Brice twins and King Evers. The picture was directed by William A. Seiter. It is another Warner Classic of the screen.

How To Be Healthy

This is the fourth of a series of articles on health subjects by a local man who is a widely known authority on the subject of physical training. Suggested health exercises begin in this installment. The Record-Herald feels that this series of articles and exercises will be of great benefit if followed carefully. Back numbers of the Record-Herald will be supplied on request for these articles. Any questions relative to the subject will be gladly answered by the author if addressed P. O. Box 5, care this paper.

By JOHN W. DEEMING
In yesterday's installment we took up the subject of cold baths. Today we will continue on the same subject by describing other ways of applying cold applications to the skin after exercise.

COLD SPLASH

This bath can be taken with nothing more than an ordinary wash bowl full of water. To begin bring several handfuls of water directly upon the face then scoop up the water with the right hand taking it up the left arm over the shoulder and into the left armpit. Do the same with the left hand over the right arm. Then splash the chest and body, working the hands around the back and wetting it as much as possible, after that give each leg a rub then give the loin parts as quick a bathing as possible.

Follow this with a vigorous rubbing taking care that the body is thoroughly dried.

COLD TOWEL OR SPONGE BATH.

Dip a towel or sponge in cold water, rub the body in the same way as in the Cold Splash bath, instead of splashing you rub with towel or sponge. Follow this with a vigorous rubbing with a rough towel until the body is dry then dress quickly.

By sufficiently wringing out the towel or sponge all splashing is avoided.

SHOWER BATH.

The shower is by far the best way to take the bath, and as in other kinds of baths there is a right and wrong way to take it. The right way is to let the water fall on the feet first then the hands and arms. Shoulders, and back and finally the chest and abdomen in the rotation named.

The shower bath should never last more than from one to three minutes.

The first exercise of our first series is given this morning and a few remarks regarding the taking of exercise should be made here. Exercise should be taken with as little clothes on as possible. If you take them in the privacy of your own room it would be best to take all clothing off. Open the windows wide so that you can get all the fresh air possible. During exercise the lungs demand more air and the air should be fresh. Also if you read carefully the first two installments of this series of articles you will see that it is necessary to have the right mental attitude. Are we ready, alright, lets go.

FIRST EXERCISE

Position

Body erect, feet three inches apart. Toes pointing directly to front. Arms in front level and parallel with shoulders.

MOVEMENT

Bring the arms out sideways and back as far as possible, at the same time raising as high as you can on your toes. Take a deep breath as arms go back. Example as the arms and feet return to starting position. Repeat eight times.

Do not let arms fall below level of shoulders. As you take in the deep breath raise the chest as high as possible without strain.

ALPHA LODGE GIVES THIRD DEGREE HERE

The third degree was conferred on a class of candidates by the officers of Alpha Lodge, No. 431, F. and A. M. at a meeting held in Masonic hall last night. In the absence of W. J. Richards, Jr., the session was presided over by C. C. Olney, who also headed the officers in the degree work.

Woodrow Wilson Film Memorial At The Wesley

Woodrow Wilson will visit Richmond in film form on Wednesday evening, June 24, at 7:45 o'clock at the Wesley Methodist church. Six reels of the real Wilson are announced for presentation, no posed or artificial pictures are exhibited of the illustrious war-president. All the scenes are actual photographs of Mr. Wilson made during his life, and all of the photographs are motion pictures. With remarkable continuity Mr. Wilson's career is shown with comprehensive detail.

Beginning with his first inauguration, his private life in the White House is depicted. Then his second inauguration, the incidents leading up to the declaration of war, the armistice, the famous trip abroad, receptions by foreign peoples, visits with European rulers, close-up views of the world's leaders during the last decade, the negotiation of the peace treaty, signing of the treaty, welcome back home, his fight for his principles upon his return to America, appearances in California, collapse, relinquishment of office, gradual physical decline, confinement to his home in Washington, pilgrimages of his admirers to his home, last public appearance, final illness, death and burial, followed by the World's reaction to his death and the eulogies of world-leaders upon his service to humanity.

The general public is invited to see this presentation. A silver offering will be taken at the door to defray expenses.

Mildred Hulett Funeral Is Held

Final tribute was paid Mrs. Mildred B. Hulett by sorrowing relatives and friends at the Stege Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon. Remains laid in state at the Wilson and Kratzer parlors till 1 o'clock and they were removed from there to the church. Rev. H. K. Sanborn, pastor of the Stege church, officiated and interment was held in Sunset View cemetery.

Mrs. Hulett was 38 years of age and the wife of Edwin B. Hulett. She was a resident of Stege for several years, and will be mourned by the entire community.

"What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and "In the Garden" was beautifully rendered by the choir, with Mrs. E. K. Skiles at the organ.

Semi-Finals In Handball Played

E. J. Hill and Maurice Church contested one of the semi-final games of the Y. M. C. A. handball tournament last night. Hill won the first game by a score of 21 to 12. Church came in from behind and wiped up the earth with his opponent, winning the next two games by the margins of 21 to 18 and 21 to 17. The game was hard fought all through and both players deserve credit.

This morning Robert Fenix and Chester Plimm will contest another of the semi-final games of the series. Fenix is the man touted by many of the onlookers as the one who stands the best chance of clinching the tournament.

A permit to erect a tank house on Forty-first street, at a cost of $125 was granted to Joe Besseghen by Building Inspector E. E. Grow yesterday.

Y. M. C. A. Field Meet To Be Held At School Field

The Y. M. C. A. will hold its field meet next Saturday afternoon at the high school grounds instead of at the First street ball park as previously announced. All who plan to participate in the meet are requested to be on the grounds by 1:45 p. m. as it is the desire of those in charge to have all contests over in time for participants and spectators to attend the air meet.

Laundry Union Elects Officers

Election of officers of the Laundryman's union, local 23, took place last evening at the regular meeting of the organization. William B. Foster was elected president of the local. Mrs. L. Pallora was elected vice-president. Cora Mallott was elected secretary of the organization for the third consecutive time. Leon Candello was elected sergeant-at-arms.

There was a big attendance at the meeting. Refreshments were served and a social was given in honor of incoming officers. A splendid time was enjoyed by all. The next meeting of the local will take place on July 14.

Pioneer Campers Learn to Swim

Every boy who attended the Y. M. C. A. Camp Pioneer during the last two weeks learned to swim, according to the announcement of Y. M. officials last night. Games of bound and hare, treasure hunts, overnight hikes, and other games furnished the youthful Pioneers and Notchers with the most enjoyable time of their summer vacation. The camp cooking was exceptionally good with the result that every boy came back in the best of condition.

TUBERCULOSIS OVERCOME
Oakland, Calif.
April 28, 1925.

For about three years I suffered from a bad cough and sore chest. I tried many doctors, all of whom pronounced my case Tuberculosis. My appetite was examined and showed tubercular germs. As I found no improvement from any of the treatments that I took I decided to give the FONG WAN HERBS a test, as a last resort.

After having drunk the herbs for four months, I was a well woman and had gained in weight. A year has elapsed since I began to take the FONG WAN HERBS on April 16, 1924; but today, I am still well and have no sign of my former complaints.

SANTA FE MAN GIVES ADDRESS AT LIONS CLUB

L. L. Galbraith, Santa Fe conductor of Richmond, while speaking before the Richmond Lions club yesterday, told how a great per centage of the crossing accidents occur, he related a number of cases in which death or serious injury resulted from failure of automobile drivers to be careful at crossings. Galbraith said that the most serious accidents are caused by drivers who are too young or too careless to look before crossing railroad tracks. "A bad at home is worth ten in a hospital" was the motto taken at the close of the address.

The Rotary club challenge to play three game series of volleyball was accepted by the Lions, whose team is captained by Isaac Lester. The members of the club gave an ovation for Dennis Shaw, who leaves Thursday for Cedar Point, Ohio, as a delegate to the international convention.

Eastbay Utility

and Piedmont cast a majority vote against the proposition, but as a result of a subsequent election 30-40 voted themselves into the district.

PRELIMINARY WORK AND THE BONDING

The entire work since the formation of the District has been directed to the task of securing an adequate, publicly owned water supply for the East Bay cities. On account of a decision of the Supreme Court the District was without funds up to July 1, 1924, but during the period from May 1923 to July 1924 much work of a preliminary nature was done. In August 1923, the Board of Directors selected Arthur P. Davis as Chief Engineer and General Manager, and William Mulholland and General George W. Goethals, the Panama Canal Builder, as Consulting Engineers. Mr. Davis proceeded at once to gather about him a corps of experienced engineers and consultants.

The period from July 1 to September 1, 1924, was devoted to a study of the available sources of water supply. Early in September General Goethals and Mr. Mulholland visited the East Bay and canvassed the findings of the Chief Engineer as to the possible sources of water supply. As a result it was unanimously decided to recommend the Mokelumne river as offering the best supply from the standpoint of accessibility, purity, quantity, and economy.

On November 4, 1924 an election was held for the purpose of choosing a Board of Directors and of voting a bond issue. The following directors were chosen: James H. Boyer, David P. Barrows, George C. Pardee, Grant D. Miller, and Alfred Latham. Acting on the recommendation tion of the Board of Engineers the people voted a bond issue of $29,000,000 for the construction of the Mokelumne project. The vote was $1,919 for; $1,998 against.

MOKELUMNE RIVER PROJECT
Since the last November election the work of the District has been directed to the completion of plans for the actual construction of the Mokelumne project. The engineering staff has completed studies and surveys of the projected line and has made profile maps of that portion of the line extending from the San Pablo reservoir to the San Joaquin river. This is known as the "emergency line."

The plans and specifications for the construction of the entire project including ten schedules in all, from San Pablo reservoir to and including Lancha Plana dam on the Mokelumne river, a distance of some ninety-three miles, will shortly be ready for bidders. It is the announced intention to complete the work by July 4, 1928, a year ahead of the allotted time, if possible.

DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED

Various difficulties have been encountered in the prosecution of the work. The chief among these being the validation of the bonds, the cases before the Railroad Commission, and bills introduced into the legislature bearing on the undertaking. In the matter of the bonds, after hearings in the Superior Court in Oakland, Judge Trabucco, in March last, handed down a decision in favor of the Utility District. The case is now pending in the Supreme Court, and a hearing will be held, we have been informed, on July 10, 1925.

SACRAMENTO RIVER PROJECT DENIED

Several cases in which the District is greatly interested have been before the Railroad Commission during the last year. The most important of these was filed in March by the East Bay Water Company asking permission to issue securities to not $9,500,000.00 to finance the Sacramento river project. This project contemplated pumping water from Mallard Slough a few miles below the city of Pittsburg and transmitting it by pipe line and tunnel to a point northwesterly of San Pablo reservoir and southeasterly from the Pitkin reservoir site.

Hearings were held on the case in April and May and arguments were presented by counsel for both the East Bay Water Company and the Utility District. The Commission denied the application of the Water Company. The grounds on which the Water Company based its arguments for this application were that an emergency situation threatened the East Bay cities in the matter of a water supply and that they must be prepared to meet this situation before it occurred; that this would furnish an abundant supply of good water at a low cost; and that they felt their responsibility to the people of the East Bay cities, in the matter. On the other hand, it was maintained that while an emergency situation was possible it was not probable; that the cost would be excessive, and that water could be brought in from the San Joaquin river at Machines driven by J. N. Asmus, 641 Fifth street, and J. Caviella, 438 Sixth street, came into collision at the intersection of Fifth and Macdonald avenue last night. No injury was sustained by either occupant, and only slight damage to the machines resulted.

CARS IN COLLISION

CELEBRATE BIRTH

According to a certificate of birth filed with the City Health department yesterday, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Roy S. Meyers, 670 Twentieth street on June 18.

less cost by a line that is an integral part of the Mokelumne project.

The substance of the decision of the Commission follows: "It seems clear, therefore, that the responsibility for bringing in a temporary supply of water, pending the completion of the Mokelumne river project, should rest upon the District, that the evidence proves the willingness of the District to assume such responsibility, as well as the desire of the people residing in the district to hold the District responsible for providing such supply. To authorize the issue of the bonds and stock, or notes, under the circumstances disclosed by the record in this proceeding would, we feel, result in a duplication of facilities and of wasteful expenditure of money both of which are contrary to public policy, and neither of which are in the public interest."

DISTRIBUTION PROBLEM

There are two important questions to be decided in the not distant future. One is a distributing system, and the other a condemnation of the water rights in the region concerned. As to the first, the two alternatives are the construction of an entirely new system suited to the plans being formulated by the Utility District, or the acquisition of the present distributing system.

The former would involve the tearing up of the streets for a long time and the duplication of an already existing system. On the other hand, it would be difficult to determine the value of the old system on account of the varying age and condition of the pipes now underground, for the existing system is a disjointed one which has been added to and altered in different sections. A new system would be a unified one with a much better pressure system, especially necessary for fire protection.

The problem is not a distant one. The Utility District Board does not propose to wait until the water is first delivered to the outskirts of the district before contemplating the distributing system, but aims to be fore-handed.

Citizens of the East Bay Region should from time to time acquaint themselves with the further problems as they present themselves to the East Bay Utility District Board and co-operate with it. The members are working for the best interest of the East Bay Water District.

KIWANIS CLUBS JOIN IN MEET AT BERKELEY

When the Richmond and the Berkeley Kiwanis clubs joined forces on Monday night at Ennor's in the College City, a good fellowship and good food were the features of the evening. The international officers who are now attending the annual convention at St. Paul had their letters read before the meeting.

Hall Sanders, president of the Richmond club, received the gavel from acting president Charles Twining of Berkeley, and thence forth the Richmond members fattened the charity fund of the host club with fines and penalties. The sergeant-at-arms was Al Schneider.

John A. Long, vice-president gave a couple of readings that got a good hand. Clare D. Horner, district trustee, told some intimate secrets touching the past of W. D. Jones, of the Berkeley club, and George Lee, chairman of the public affairs committee, made a hit discussing the topics: "How It Feels for an Englishman to be Envoy Extraordinary to California From Portugal and Italy." Rev. Frank Woten gave a prayer for the absent Kiwanians.

Those who made up the Richmond delegation were C. D. Horner, J. A. Long, C. H. Hunt, Charles M. Court-right, John B. Silveria, E. Kearney, Al Schneider, Dr. C. A. Stock, Rev. Frank Woten, John Regello, Hall W. Sanders, R. Y. Wharton, Ralph Bergen and E. E. Grow.

Frank C. Shallenberger, principal of Roosevelt Junior high school, will be chairman of Wednesday's meeting.

RUST-CAMPBELL HOUSE WARMING THIS EVENING

A house-warming will be held in the new Rust-Campbell golf factory from eight to twelve o'clock this evening, at their new location, San Pablo and Andrade avenues. Dancing will be featured and refreshments will be served throughout the evening.

The company has a good outlook as it has already received more orders than it will be able to fill with the initial output. This factory is the first manufacturer of golf equipment on the Pacific coast, and is expected to be a tremendous success.

Those who will attend the entertainment this evening are reminded that the factory is one block beyond the Grand Canyon park car line, on San Pablo avenue.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any druggist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys twice a year.
